

PRME Principles for Responsible Management Education

CHAPTER ITALY

UN PRME

The mission of UN PRME (United Nations Principles for Responsible Management Education) is to transform management education and develop responsible decision-makers of tomorrow to support sustainable development. Over 850 universities in 95 countries are members of PRME.

i5 Playbook

The "The Impactful Five (i5): Learning in Leadership Education" playbook for academic educators is the result of a multi-year research project initiated by UN PRME, with participation from the LEGO Foundation, Harvard Project Zero, and Sullitest. The motivation behind the playbook was to support the development of the next generation of responsible leaders by promoting teaching methods based on play and holistic skill development, as well as responsible leadership. The i5 Playbook is available in several languages on the PRME website.

i5 Pedagogy

The i5 Playbook identifies five key characteristics of learning:

- Joy and well-being
 - Active engagement
 - Meaningfulness
 - Social interactions
 - Iteration

i5 Training

European academics involved in the i5 project have developed a training program aimed at spreading the i5 approach in academic teaching. The program began in spring 2023. It aims to share knowledge and create opportunities for educators to implement i5 pedagogy and exchange experiences with others involved in the project.
